Chicago, Ill – February 6, 2025

In a new innovative initiative aimed at supporting educators in their professional growth CAHIIM today announced the launch of its new microcredential program for educators in higher education. This program provides educators with specialized skills and competence to enhance their teaching and leadership practices and knowledge of academic accreditation. As well as staying current with the latest educational trends.

“Our new microcredential program is a testament to our commitment to quality education and professional growth for educators,” said Dr. Angela Kennedy, CAHIIM CEO. “We understand the challenges that educators face, and this program is tailored to equip them with practical and relevant skills that are immediately applied in the modern classroom and their leadership role.”

The microcredential program offers a variety of topics focused on key areas such as instructional and curriculum design, student assessment, developing microcredentials, incorporating pedagogy and digital technologies, and leading continuous quality improvement and academic accreditation. These flexible mini-courses allow educators to apply their engagement at CAHIIM’s Accreditation Process training and Summit as an optional program activity. Participants will earn a badge upon completion of each mini-course, and a microcredential validation upon completion of practical application to add to their professional portfolio to demonstrate their expertise.

With a growing demand for qualified leaders in the education sector, CAHIIM’s microcredential program provides a valuable opportunity for educators to enhance their skills and advance their careers. The program also includes access to a community of fellow educators and industry experts, fostering collaboration and knowledge sharing.

More information will be circulated to CAHIIM partners and program directors and posted on the CAHIIM website.
